ABSTRACT

Recruitment, promotion, and retention of women in academic medicine and how to support women faculty requires a greater focus in ensuring the advancement of women’s careers. The National Institute of Health is focusing on nationwide programs that assist women in medicine with overcoming career advancement barriers by creating a supportive community for female faculty to ensure full participation in their field and career success. The AAMC reports that women in academic medicine are often reluctant to pursue professional goals, due to challenges in obtaining career-advancing mentoring, which contributes to a lack of social capital and essential information, this isolation often results in reducing their capacity for risk taking.1 By supporting and promoting the careers of women in medicine we can prevent those in the workforce from leaving and encourage those who aspire to hold leadership positions during their career. Women in medicine programs play a critical role in supporting women’s careers and can improve recruitment and retention of women by providing opportunities for networking, sponsorship, mentorship, and career development. WIAM’s focus on organizing initiatives in women faculty leadership development and mentoring would provide guidance to mid-career and junior faculty members in a larger forum. Additionally, WIAM seeks to learn from other institutions who have robust programs to support women scientists and clinicians. Having their leaders come to share their experiences and strategies will help advance the goals of WIAM. These lecturers listed below would serve as key note speaker for faculty, residents and fellows on the importance recruitment, retention and promotion of women faculty. The presentation will include information on local and national leadership opportunities, promotion, mentoring, and networking. This program will be open to all faculty, residents and fellows.

ACTIVITY GOALS

The Women in Academic Medicine (WIAM) group strives to coordinate programs to support women medical faculty and celebrate their achievements. The mission of WIAM is to develop programming to aid in the recruitment, retention and leadership advancement of women faculty at the medical school. WIAM is chaired by volunteers Dr. Abbo and Dr. Van Zuilen. This program currently has an operating budget of $2,000.00. WIAM with the assistance of the Office of Diversity and Inclusion at the Miller School of Medicine has sponsored numerous programs including speed mentoring, ELAM panel discussions, and sessions on promotions and career advancement.

The overall goal of the professional development proposal is to support the advancement of women through education and resources. We have identified two national key leaders that have established successful initiatives for women faculty. We are requesting funding to invite one of them to our campus for a day long professional development event. Our first choice is Dr. Hannah Valantine

1 Bauman MD, Howell, LP, Villablanca AC. The Women in Medicine and Health Science Program: An Innovative Initiative to Support Female Faculty at the University of California Davis School of Medicine. Acad Med. 2014 Nov;89(11):1462-6.
(Bio below) Chief Officer for Scientific Workforce Diversity from the National Institute of Health. As an alternative, we have identified Roz Usheroff from The Usheroff Institute (Bio below).

Dr. Hannah Valantine became NIH’s first permanent Chief Officer for Scientific Workforce Diversity in March 2014. In this role, Dr. Valantine leads NIH’s effort to diversify the biomedical research workforce by developing a vision and comprehensive strategy to expand recruitment and retention, and promote inclusiveness and equity throughout the biomedical research enterprise.

Dr. Valantine came to the NIH from Stanford University where she served as Senior Associate Dean for Diversity and Leadership at Stanford School of Medicine, and Professor of Cardiovascular Medicine at Stanford University Medical Center. Dr. Valantine studied biochemistry at London University and attended St. George’s Hospital Medical School. She completed her post-graduate work in the field of cardiology in London at Royal Brompton Hospital and Hammersmith Hospital. She moved to the United States to train as a fellow with leading cardiologists and cardiac surgeons, including heart transplant pioneer Norman Shumway, MD, PhD. In addition to a prestigious career in cardiology, Dr. Valantine is a past recipient of the NIH Director’s Pathfinder Award for Diversity in the Scientific Workforce and has a proven record on implementing diversity initiatives in academic medicine.

Also, Roz Usheroff is a leadership, image and branding specialist, entertaining and educating diverse audiences across continents with her insights and vision on what it takes to achieve leadership and corporate success.

Over the past two decades, Roz’s unique abilities have positioned her to work with Fortune 500 companies worldwide. She leads her clients to maximize on their personal brand, unique abilities and talents, attract followers and distinguish themselves.

Roz has shared her insights at distinguished educational institutions such as Northwestern University, Kellogg School of Management and University of Toronto and has appeared on national radio and television (NBC, CBC, and BTV). She has spoken to the Association of Physicians of Indian Origin in North America as well as delivering keynotes addresses in Dubai, Singapore, Shanghai, Chile and Germany.

She is author of "Customize Your Career: How to Develop a Winning Strategy to Move Up, Move Ahead or Move On,” “Taking the Leap. How to Manage your Career in Turbulent Times and Beyond” and her latest book, “THE FUTURE OF YOU: Creating your Enduring Brand.”

SYMPOSIUM OBJECTIVES

- Assist WIAM group in their mission to assist in the advancement and leadership of women in academic medicine.
- Discuss opportunities and challenges for women in advancing their academic careers in medicine. Assist women faculty in identifying personal skill sets in need of further career and leadership development.
• Presentation on local and national leadership opportunities to include, but not limited to, how to become a member of a national board, how to get involved with local science related chapters of national organizations, and presenting at conferences locally/nationally.

• Networking and mentoring opportunity. WIAM surveyed the members and they stated there was a need for more networking type events to meet others who can serve as mentors in their field. The University of Miami is a mid-size institution separated by three main campuses. There are not many opportunities for women to come together in an academic setting aside from SEEDS-related events. This event would help support the SEEDS mission.

• At the end of the program, participants will be asked to complete an assessment on the event(s) to evaluate program impact. Findings will be shared with SEEDS leadership.

BUDGET

We are seeking to support a WOMEN IN ACADEMIC MEDICINE LEADERSHIP AND TALENT DEVELOPMENT EVENT. This invite will be open to all faculty. The estimated costs are:

Key Note speaker Hotel/Transportation $1,500.00
(We will engage other departments to cost share the speaker’s honorarium. The amount listed above is only a portion of the speaker’s estimated rate).

Cost of program printing $200.00
(In house printing to save on cost)

Refreshments/coffee break $800.00

Total $2,500.00
